You cannot deny the fact—the only way to be successful in the clothing business is to sell clothing that will give your customers satisfaction.

We claim for the H & H Overcoats, that they wear well, hold their shape, fit well, and are the best in the world for the price.

No one can possibly say that all overcoats are perfect—but we do as well—yes, better, than other dealers in the same line and guarantee that all of our clothing will give satisfaction, or else we refund your money.

Have you worn the "Hess See?" If not, get your feet in a pair and you will step like a new man.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Two more divorce cases were filed yesterday in the district court. The divorces are keeping about even with the marriage licenses.

Sheriff Ault went to Lapeenworth last night with a batch of prisoners for the pen.

Mrs. Frank Thompson of El Dorado is in the city visiting her friend, Mrs. Fred Edick of Waco avenue.

C. A. Hyde of New York, representing one of the large music houses of that metropolis, is in the city visiting Thomas Shaw.

Mr. Troop, manager of the Wichita Book company is making extensive preparations for his grand holiday opening which will take place about Dec. 3. It will be an opening long to be remembered.

The arrest of a woman on West Douglas avenue yesterday by Officer Harmon caused a small stir of excitement.

Hon. Eugene Ware of Ft. Scott arrived in the city last night and is stopping at the Carey.

Indications of the approach of the holidays can already be seen everywhere around the city and particularly among the stores where nice display arrangements have already been begun.

A vicious horse caused no small amount of excitement on the corner of Douglas and Fourth avenue last night by kicking the buggy to which he was attached almost into smithereens. The owner was a man named Shay living east of the city.

County Treasurer John Doran reports taxpayers paying claims against them at his office with noticeable promptness. And what is very unusual they are paying their taxes in full and thus saving the percentage incident to letting them run over till June.

Colonel Woodcock is now one of the members of the clerical force of the treasurer's office. He is a useful man in that position and one upon whom Mr. Doran places the utmost confidence. John is giving preference to old soldiers in his appointments.

Judge Musell has returned from a hunting expedition in the territory and has brought back with him a magnificent trophy—a large wild turkey for a month.

The board of trade have invited and expect the attendance of a good many of the leading citizens to attend the reception of Governor-elect Lewelling this evening.

The physicians of the city are taking quite an interest in the electrical lecture course of the University extension bureau. They regard electricity as one of the coming great agencies in the amelioration of physical suffering.

To avoid the rush at the opera house door this afternoon, tickets will be sold at Fred Rich's drug store, 106 East Douglas avenue.

It is now regarded in political circles as a settled fact that Ex Sheriff Rufus Cone will be made warden of the state penitentiary. Wichita, it is expected, will also get a railway commissioner, and perhaps one of the commissioners of the supreme court. This is not what is called in diplomatic circles, "inspired," but it is comparatively reliable.

A young man going east on Douglas avenue yesterday afternoon met a young lady, and each glanced at the other at the same time. And just as they shot the casual glance a note struck the young man in the right eye, causing him to wink, and a thinking sunbeam struck the lady in the left eye, making her wink. The situation was of course, embarrassing, and to relieve it of its awkwardness, as quick as a flash each winked the other eye. A sharp observer would have noticed that either one smiled—after they had passed by.

A couple from Colwich over 60 years of age were married at the Occidental hotel parlors Thursday afternoon.

Mr. J. D. Smith and Miss May Binkley were wedded yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Commercial hotel.

MRS. ROBSON'S DRESSES.

American Women Have More Taste Than Their English Cousins.

There is perhaps no dressmaker in the United States who has not been approached with the remark: "Oh, did you see Miss So-and-So's costume in such and such a play? I wish you would make me one just like what she wears!"

I believe, writes Mrs. May Waldron Robson in the New York Sunday Journal, that half the actresses could give our dressmakers points about becoming attire. I design all my own costumes. I first see what would look well on me, then exert my ingenuity to derive new alterations, and, last of all, consult the fashion.

I have bought many dresses made abroad, but when I return to America I am always sorry for it. I find our American women have real taste and know what is most becoming to them, whereas the French and English put on anything fashionable.

It is necessary that the costumes and everything about be in harmony. There must be no clash of color—it must all have the effect at all times of a beautifully colored painting. How to do this satisfactorily to all has been solved by our managers in this way: The leading lady is first consulted as to what colors she intends to wear. Those colors are handed to the second lady, with instructions to pick out costumes that will harmonize. And so it goes down the scale.

The wear and tear of dresses on the stage is awful, coming from hurried packing, carelessness in handling, quick changes and the different nails and divers of stage carpentry, which are death to dresses. An actress must have some capital to start with in this profession. I use two new costumes each season for each change in every part I play, and each of them is of the best material obtainable. I spoiled eight dresses season before last in the tumble I took in the office scene in "The Henrietta."

Almost every professional has some hobby. I have mine. It is the fan. I have a mania for them, and the result is that I have a family of nearly 500 fans of all ages, sizes and colors. One is over 150 years old, and another literally covers the side of my parlor in our residence at Cohasset. But the most unique in my collection is one presented me by a missionary. It is made of the bones of a leopard and covered with leopard's hair, woven into a beautiful tape in "The Henrietta" cost $1,000; and in "The Stoops to Conquer" I use a fan a hundred years old.

Junkermann Coming to America.

A prominent representative of the humor and pathos expressed in the works of Fritz Reuter, the Low German author, will soon appear in this country under the direction of Gustav Amberg. This is August Junkermann, who brings a company of twenty men and women, selected by him from the leading German theaters for this season's tour in the United States. The repertory which Mr. Junkermann brings with him includes some of the foremost productions of the dramatic literature of Germany of the last decade, and not only Low German plays adapted from Reuter's works, but also plays in the High German.

Twice as Good.

"How did you like my latest contribution?" asked the poet of the editor.

The Villain Exposed.

Too Much Encouragement.

Penelope—Bridget, when Mr. Richy calls here again I want you to be more polite to him.

Bridget (warningly)—Faith, mumm, if I do the old fool may think I want to marry him too.—Brooklyn Life.
